

Bavariaville's New Hero

By Fritz Herrmann

Prince Fritz has just recovered from his injuries in the healing water chamber after his fight with Dr. Colivs and lost. He felt very calm as the doctors dried him off. After they dried him, I gave him the spare clothes I brought with me for Fritz to change into.

"You all better now, Fritz?" I asked after he changed into his new clothes.

"Uh-huh," replied Fritz.

As we got into my hovercar, Fritz started to yawn and it made me say, "I think you need some rest before we get you back in shape and test your superpowers."

On the way back to my house, Fritz soon fell fast asleep in my hovercar as I glanced at him to see how he was doing.

When we got back into my house, Fritz was still asleep, so I picked him up, who was lightweight for me to carry, and brought him into a bed to finish his rest.

While Fritz was sleeping, I put some lavender oil on myself because I was worried that I thought he was still in a coma. But I remembered that he recovered from his injuries and he just needed some rest.

After Fritz got well-rested, we went to my laboratory to get him in good shape and test his superpowers.

"All right, Fritz," I said. "We're going to have you go through that obstacle course again a few times to get you in shape again, and then we'll test your superpowers."

"I'm on it," Fritz said with preparation.

He started running through the obstacle course a second after I rang the bell and ran towards the first of those steep ramps and grabbed hold of the ledge in one try. He then ran really fast and did not give up going up all those other ramps.

I watched with amazement as Fritz jumped up and down the stepping stones without losing his balance. A few seconds later, he reached the other side of the stones.

By the apex ladder, Fritz held his confidence as he remembered what he had done a few years ago. Before he went up and down the ladder, he took a few steps back from it and ran towards it. He climbed right up the ladder using only his feet without losing his balance and did not include his hands for balance. Fritz ran right down the apex ladder and landed on the ground, standing in triumph.

“Excellent!” I shouted. “Now, onto the course for your superpowers to be tested!”

After Fritz went to the room with the metal cutouts displayed as innocent civilians and terrorists, I said to him, “Now you have to hone your powers to focus on the terrorists. Remember, those terrorists and innocent civilians are just fake metal cutouts and don’t get too angry. That’s another reason why you lost against Dr. Colivs.”

The cutouts started to pop out in front of Fritz, and he jumped up on a ledge and aimed carefully to where his bolts of lightning should go and shot a streak of lightning from his hands at the terrorist. Then many terrorists went down from the cause of lightning scattering around without any civilian casualties.

Fritz jumped off the ledge and was prepared for the next wave after some deep breaths. As more cutouts popped out, one popped out very close to Fritz. He got startled and got ready to strike at it, but he then spared it as he realized that the cutout was a civilian and he went on to go to the other cutouts.

Fritz did his best to go for the terrorists instead of the civilians. As there was a line of only terrorists, he breathed out a big ball of fire and the line of terrorists went down. Some sparks from Fritz's fire started to fly after the blast of the fire. Fritz saw the sparks and ran to catch every single one of them that was going down towards a civilian and absorbed the sparks in his hands.

As I saw that Fritz was worried about the sparks and saw him catching them, I could also tell that he was worried the room he was in would catch fire, so I told him, "Don't worry, the walls and floor in this room are inflammable."

"Well I'm relieved," Fritz said. "But I don't want the civilians to get hurt."

"I know," I said. "Just keep it up!"

Two hours later, after testing his superpowers and getting him in good fighting shape, Fritz felt worked up and I gave him a pat on the back for a job well done.

Just before Fritz was ready to stop Dr. Colivs, he rested on a comfy chair and I left him alone where I started inventing a drone to track Fritz to make sure he doesn't get hurt while fighting. I also had a plan to give the citizens of Bavariaville a big surprise.

Right after his rest, Fritz saw what I was inventing and wondered what the drone was for.

"I will be watching you to make sure you don't get hurt like last time," I said. "I'm going to show the footage to the citizens. And don't worry, the drone is small enough to be in perfect hiding places, so Dr. Colivs and his robots won't see it. The recording also has excellent quality no matter where my drone goes."

"Thank you," said Fritz. "I will be seeing you soon again. I really mean it. You got me in excellent shape and the powers you gave me are well tested."

After Fritz flew off into the sky, I gave an announcement to the entire city of Bavariaville.

“May I have all your attention please,” I called to the people. “I’m Lee Lindemann and I am introducing you to a new hero. I’m going to show you a live recording of him fighting the terrorist who wrecked the castle.”

I put the footage that my drone was showing on to the big screens of the city buildings. It showed some clouds and then went down to the mountains. The drone went into Colivs’ lair where Fritz was fighting Colivs and his robots. The citizens and I realized that Colivs was really angry and he thought Fritz was dead.

“Go get him!” yelled a citizen to Fritz.

“Yeah!” shouted the others. “Go Fritz!”

A few minutes later, Fritz left Colivs’ robots charred and smashed with blown circuits.

“All right Fritz!” shouted Colivs in fury. “You’re going to see what we both have in common.”

Colivs took off his lab coat and goggles and showed that he had lightning power like Fritz’s. It didn’t even startle Fritz, but the citizens and I were.

Colivs said, “Now you’re really going to die, Fritz, like your parents did. When I’m finished with you, I will have Lee dead as well and keep terrorizing Bavariaville and the whole world.”

Fritz got really furious and let out a shot of lightning as Colivs let out a shot of lightning as well. It made a huge ball of lightning and Fritz’s hands started to shake. The lair started to shake too.

Both Fritz and Colivs kept their balance as the ball of lightning they made got bigger and bigger to try and shoot lightning at each other. Fritz took a deep breath to stop his hands from shaking as he remembered me telling him, that his anger was one of reasons he lost against his first fight with Colivs.

Suddenly, the ball of lightning moved towards Colivs and it blew up sending both Fritz and Colivs flying, but Fritz caught on to a platform to stop himself from getting hurt.

Colivs kept flying until he crashed into one of the walls and fell down the mountain, straight to his death.

Colivs' lair started to crumble. Luckily, Fritz spotted my drone, so he took it with him to safety before he left.

The citizens who watched the fight between Prince Fritz and Dr. Richard Colivs started to cheer.

As Fritz arrived back to Bavariaville, where a big crowd was waiting, they lifted the both of us up and congratulated us for protecting Bavariaville and the whole world. The crowd lifted me up because they knew that I made that elixir for Fritz when he was a baby and I made some perfect inventions and none of them have illegal materials.

Months later, at a new built castle, we had a big party for the both of us, as Fritz looked forward on continuing to work hard on protecting this world. And Bavariaville even got very few terrorist incidents like last time, and became a safer place to dwell.

The End